If I was a green thing I'd be a Godzilla.
Who wouldn't want to be amphibious, invulnerable, and able to shoot huge beams from his mouth? I certainly would enjoy it. The pros include never needing to eat, never needing to work, and having the world as your oyster. Not that I'm the world domination type, however, I am human. All humans crave power and control. But I digress.
Being a Godzilla, I could sleep in the ocean depths undisturbed for as long as I liked, and for entertainment, destroy Tokyo. Again, And Again. And Again.